Overheard from Tourists in Thailand

- "Do you have that in my size? This Tag says XL but it is still too small for me?" (a rather Thick American lady at a Thai clothing stall for Thai women)
- "I had an ass like a faucet till I went to McDonalds" A tourist at the Pharmacy near Nana
- "I want to marry her... how hard is it to make that happen? She would be a perfect wife!" A drunk guy at the Black Pagoda—first time in BKK
- "How much to go to Silom?" A guy leaning into a window of a taxi on Silom.

Teflon Thailand... Words of the Wise...

Recently, I was smacked with the white glove of "reality"— upon a knee jerk reaction to an article I read on Thai-Visa.com. The Article was basically about a HUGE crack down that will happen on alcohol and the government led infringement on the night life and party scene that Thailand has built up over the last 60+ years. Like others: "OH SHIT! Here we fking Go!".. Came to mind.. No Beer Girls, No selling of booze after midnight.. No Happy Hours.. No ash trays with Singha on them.. DAMN WORLD IS COMING TO AN END!! Blogs went off as people declared that Thailand was DONE and that they would go to Vietnam or someplace where booze fell off golden titties until 6 am in the morning. My Mind went to the next level too: Operation HAPPY Thailand was turning into a draconian state where they fooled everyone into falling for the oldest trick in the book: Make them feel happy and then hit em' with a sharp left.. Knock out punch!!! What was next? No ladies? No fireworks? No ice-cream on Sundays? (well basically just the first one!)

Nevertheless.. My panic button went off and I started calling people. As I'm no spring chicken in Thailand I figure I'm fairly smart with Thailand issues. However— it took a seasoned compadre to calm me of my frantic mode: "Thailand will always be what it is! It might change for a week or two in one direction or the other, but it always lands like a cat— back on its feet..." These words rolled out like honey into my ears. After a brief in -depth discussion about the history and the fact that many times over— Thailand has declared much the same before . Rules come and go.. Yet Thailand always seems to mold itself back to what it was and should be. Like an Egg in a frying pan: it burns, sizzles and makes noise— but always rolls out onto the plate as it did before. Call it Thailand's Teflon ways.. Maybe scrambled— but more than likely it will be sunny side up in the end!

Many a customer have said they love the BP— the funk and the groovy disco House music is always a fun thing, BUT the Customers also like good Old Fashioned Rock! This Event will feed this need for good ol' fashioned Rock and let people tap into their inner core musical desires! A Mix of Classic and some more recent Rock tunes will play through the night.. Zep, Jimi, Petty— maybe even toss in some ol' Iron Butterfly.. The Black Label will be 100 bath all night and the ladies will be wearing small white tanks tops and black panties.. Come down and help rock the BP— If popular, this could become a Regular event!! Rock on!!!

Good Luck!!! Auspicious Thailand

Anyone who has spent a minute in Thailand is aware of Thais' "Auspicious" nature. Be it the numbers, the good luck charms, the routines— it is impossible to not see it everywhere. Recently in the news, the new Premier Gen. Prayuth made it clear that he has been the target of a black magic attack and thus poured sacred water on his body which in turn made him sick. 286 million Baht was also spent on fixing up and changing the houses of government— Painting rooms Green (As Green fits Prayuth's Feng shui) and the furniture has been moved to aid "quick Solutions". The Roads into the House of Government was repaved to "remove any bad luck from previous PM Yingluck.

It is always a treat to talk to Thais about good luck and bad luck... numbers... what they do as a routine to prosper.

It is also common when doing business in Thailand, that meetings are set-up on certain days at certain times for Good luck! Recently, as with Prayuth's cabinet, I was requested to attend an official meeting: a meeting on 9-9-9.. Sept 9th at 9:00 am.. As this would give us a "lucky edge for success!"

I had a rabbits foot when I was younger and carried it around. It brought me comfort. and the day I lost that rabbits foot— I got hit by car on my bicycle. I was riding my bike around looking for my lost rabbits foot! IS there lucky vibes and some magic power that floats around regulating the karma and magic invisible world around us? If a person wants to believe— that is for them to decided. My horoscope is always wrong and fortune tellers scare me.. But for others?
